 ©storymassage.co.uk	There is a legend about a brave king of Scotland called Robert Bruce.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	In his first year as king, Robert the Bruce was defeated in battle by the English and forced to run away.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	According to the legend, Robert the Bruce hid in a small, dark cave. He felt very low in confidence and did not know what to do.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	But then he saw a little spider trying to spin a web on the wall of cave.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	The spider kept falling again and again.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	Each time it fell, the spider rose to begin trying again. It refused to give up.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	Finally, the spider succeeded in weaving a web.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	Robert the Bruce was inspired by this little spider. He was full of courage and determination.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	He left the cave and continued to fight the English with a victory at the famous battle of Bannockburn.
 ©storymassage.co.uk	We can all learn from the little spider. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again.
